

May 25, 2013

To Whom It May Concern:

Jessica Forgety was a student teacher for the entire 2012-2013 school year. During this time, Jessica showed a deep and loving demeanor to all of the children in my classroom. This is a key quality in teaching any age, but especially crucial in our kindergarten classroom. She maintained a thorough knowledge of students' capabilities, potential, and circumstances both inside and outside the classroom that effected their demeanors, ability to learn, and overall dispositions, which again is requirement of all educators in all age brackets.

Furthermore, Jessica was always punctual and gave ample notice for any absences during the school year. This respect and responsibility was especially poignant during the spring when she faced a devastating family situation and continued to show up to the school with the same disposition and care that she had the rest of the school year.

The students all responded in admiration and adoration of Jessica because she was able to listen to them throughout their days, and she always was mindful of their individual situations that surrounded their learning. I appreciate all the hard work and kindness that she gave to our classroom this past school year!

Sincerely,

Emily Spahr
Kindergarten Teacher
Clinton Elementary School